ATHLETES WHO SCRAPPED

Accident to Penn's Wrestling Captain Will Keep Him Out of Yale Bouts.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., February 13.—"Bob" Folwell, captain of the Pennsylvania wrestling team, injured his side so severely yesterday afternoon in a practice bout that he will be unable to wrestle for Penn against Yale Saturday night, and possibly be out of it for the remainder of the season. Folwell was practicing different holds with Charles Pickett, the old Swarthmore football player, in the variety gymnasium, when the accident occurred. Pike, who weighs thirty pounds more than Penn's captain, gave his opponent a flying fall, landing on him as he touched the mat. Folwell instantly relaxed, and it was found that one of his ribs was protruding far beyond its fellows.

R. T. McKenzie, director of physical education at the university, made an examination. At first he thought the rib was broken, but closer inspection showed that it was torn completely loose from the cartilages attaching it to the other ribs. Dr. McKenzie said he could not tell for a couple of days how severe the injury was, but that Folwell probably be unable to wrestle for at least two or three weeks.

LORD FOLLOWS WATTELL

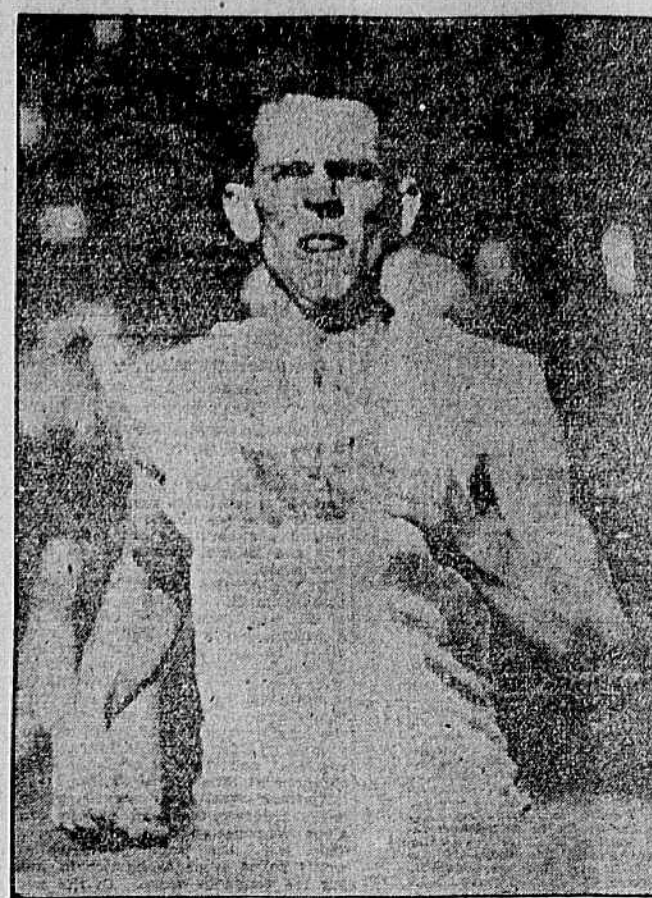

Another Old Member of Athletic Team Sold by Constance Mack.

PHILADELPHIA, February 13.—"Bris" Lord, who has been a substitute outfielder on the Athletic team for several years, has been sold to New Orleans.

Lord, however, refuses to go, and has wired Chairman Hermann, of the National Commission, asking for his release. Lord will find himself up against it, as there is no chance for him if all the other clubs in the two big leagues have waived claim on him.

Lord was a pretty fair right-handed hitter and a good fielder, but his stupid work on bases and at bat kept him from securing a regular place on the team. Mack evidently has one of his youngsters in view for the utility role next season.

RACE WITHOUT BETTING

John E. Madden Says Sport Will Live With No Gambling. Spectacular Betting at the Race-Track a Thing of the Past.

NEW YORK, February 13.—"Horse racing no longer depends on betting. People will go to see horses race when bookmakers are dead."

Thus John E. Madden, the veteran turfman, answered the question as to his opinion of Governor Hughes's endeavor to prevent betting at race tracks. Mr. Madden arrived here from abroad on the Cunard steamer Caronia. With him were his sons, Edward and Joseph. The latter had been away for seventy days, traveling in France and Egypt.

"Racing," Madden continued, "has reached a degree of strength where it no longer depends upon pool selling and betting to win it the support and interest of the public."

"Spectacular betting at race tracks has become a thing of the past, anyway, and has no longer the approval of legitimate racing interests. The sport is a clean, wholesome one, and worth taking up for itself. It has won the approval of men of money and leisure in America and will endure, gambling or no gambling."

"There is one point I would like to make in favor of horse racing. It provides a clean, healthy amusement for the young men of the country who have money, but who have no serious interests."

Madden announced that his son Edward is to do the chief riding for his stable this year. Edward Madden is fourteen years old and can ride at ninety-two pounds. The youngster, a bright lad, said he has been riding horses since he was four years old and has ridden all of his father's horses in their morning spins and at other times.

Asked about his future on the turf, Mr. Madden said he had at the present time fifty-four horses in training at Washington. All of them will be tried out during the coming racing season, and Mr. Madden expects that from this number he will be able to get a horse that will capture the English Derby in 1909. He has entered nine horses in the Derby. He was rather enthusiastic about this year, because, as he said, no American horse has won the Derby for many years—not since Pierre Lorillard captured it with Tigris.

Besides his Derby entry, he has also entered six horses in the Oaks and three in the Grand National. All of these horses will be sent abroad in September of this year after the whole stable has been tried out here in the spring.

"The horses I will send abroad will be the survival of the fittest among the fifty-four I have in training," he said. "I will not count on any one way as the pick of seventy yearlings that
